The Social Side of Washington

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
 Washington, D. C., June 11.—Commencement week on the capital calendar began with real June weather, and four large commencements, graduating nearly 1,000 young men and women in the professions. Many of the winners of diplomas deserve especial credit for their success, for they have averaged seven and one-half hours per day for Uncle Sam, attended lectures in the early evening and studied by the light of the midnight oil. Now, armed with the much-coveted sheepskin, the majority will forsake the government, with its ever-narrowing possibilities for advancement, and cast their lot in the world of larger opportunity. This, too, despite the sop held out by the proposed legislation which provides hope that a man may advance to a living salary before he becomes too old in the service to care whether he lives or not.

The question of a government clerk's wage was never more potent to the country, and if a remedy is not forthcoming pretty soon, Uncle Sam may find himself minus able-bodied male servants in the civil branch of the official work. The price paid for every other kind of government service, from that of the President, Vice-President, members of the Cabinet and Congress down to soldiers in the ranks, has been increased within the last few years. The government clerk alone is expected to live and be happy and raise a Rooseveltian family on a salary scale that has remained unaltered for forty years.

The cost of living advanced mean-while to such proportions that Congress felt obliged to remedy its end by increasing the pay of its members 50 per cent, then appointed a joint committee of the Senate and House to investigate the whys and wherefores of the increased cost of living. Extensive witness after extensive witness was examined, and still the bottom of the problem could not be reached to the satisfaction of the committee chairman, Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, who next asked for an appropriation of $65,000 good dollars to defray the expense of further investigation, but not a penny for the advancement of the great mass of humanity which keeps well-oiled the brain-wheels of Federal machinery.

The week opened with one of the most important conferences held at the White House since the beginning of this administration—a meeting lasting many hours and attended by leading railroad men and Cabinet lawyers, and resulted in a special message from the President to Congress, and a mighty perturbed majority in the big-domed house on the hill.

The week was also marked by a visit from the most distinguished Japanese touring America in recent years—Prince and Princess Fushima No Miya, cousins of the Emperor of Japan, the mysterious appearance and as sudden disappearance here of Rudolph Srebrak, the millionaire graft-bugger of San Francisco, and the test striking, though scarcely less interesting, spring visit of Mrs. Post Wheeler, known in the literary world as Hallie Farnie. Rives and in the diplomatic as the wife of the American charge d'affaires at the Court of St. Petersburg. Mrs. Wheeler was the guest of the American ambassador in Tokyo at the time of her marriage to the then secretary of the embassy, for a short period thereafter was the social leader of the American colony in Japan, succeeding in that position Mrs. Luke E. Wright, who retired from the diplomatic corps to appear as a Cabinet hostess in Washington toward the close of the Roosevelt administration. During her several visits and subsequent ones to the White House, Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler became known to the members of the Japanese royal family, whom she is now assisting to welcome in the tion, including an aged mother, requires her frequent presence in Utah, where she and her husband are to-day witnessing the marriage of their niece, Miss Harriet Sherman to Mr. William Cross. Present also at the wedding are Mr. and Mrs. Lotan Hunt of Utah, who were the Sherman's guests here during the early week.

Around the corner from the Sherman home is the Washington residence of the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. von Meyer, a hospitable centre, which was closed for the summer on Thursday, when the wife and daughters went to their warm weather home near Hamilton, Mass. When Mrs. Meyer passed from the post of "Mrs. Postmaster-General" to that of "Mrs. Secretary of the Navy," and took the former home of Mrs. Scott on Scott Circle, it was predicted that she would lead the society of the navy as it had not been led since the passing of Mrs. William C. Whitney as a Cabinet hostess. How well the prophecy has been fulfilled is told by the history of Washington society during the season of 1909 and '10. Mrs. Meyer is particularly noted for her birth and her social experiences in the European capitals to which her husband was the accredited ambassador of the United States for the leadership of so gay a circle as that represented by Uncle Sam's navy. Her young daughters, Miss Meyer and Miss Alice Meyer, also enter joyously into the spirit of their duty as members of the administration circle, and seldom absent themselves from Washington during the official season.

The wedding par excellence of the week was that of Miss Clara Townsend, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander K. Anderson, to Frederick C. B. Le Gro, of California. The ceremony took place in St. Margaret's Episcopal Church, Rev. G. C. Bratton, officiating. Secretary of War Dickinson escorted the bride to the altar and gave her hand in marriage. The wedding was a pink one, as the bride's maidens' gowns were of rose pink chiffon embroidered in gold, and the church decorations were pink roses with palms. The bride's gown of cream satin, veiled with rare old lace, embroidered with roses and studded with brilliant, was one of the most striking bridal robes seen during the season. The bride gave her attendants as souvenirs silver filigree necklaces, which she secured during a recent visit to Guatemala.
